

LEWIS-CLARK STATE COLLEGE

Engineering Technology

OVERVIEW: The Engineering Technology program provides students with skills as they relate to computer aided drafting, surveying (Civil, Geomatics), Solid Modeling and CNC Machining (Mechanical option), and other similar skill sets. In addition, the program offers a background in mathematics (through trigonometry), physics, communications, writing, and design concepts. In the second year of the program, students electing not to take the general (traditional) program may direct their study emphasis in Geographic Information Systems, Civil Engineering, or Mechanical Engineering.

“LCSC is a great state school with the feel of a private school at a low cost. Engineering tech, in every field, is about aiding engineers by collecting, visualizing, editing data and eventually constructing, modifying, and problem solving ... I have no loans and have been able to work for a city, county, and now the Washington State Department of Transportation.” -

Tyler MacMillan '17, Washington State Department of Transportation

“Having attempted and failed the standard curriculum-driven classes, I was almost out of fuel and ready to throw in the towel with college. Changing my degree to mechanical technology was the best decision I made.

The courses are still curriculum driven but the pace is much different ... The course material and projects are designed to allow you to work at a pace more comfortable but it doesn't limit you.” -

Frank Lagrimanta '13, Mechanical Designer, Buck Knives
